

I am a big supporter of satellite radio and value the freedom of choice Americans have, satellite radio being one of those many available choices. I feel that XM satellite radio offers a great product and there should not be any restrictions put on what they can offer, such as local traffic and weather. I think it is ridiculous that restricting such a thing is even being considered. What could possibly be the reason other than other parties being threatened by the success of satellite radio? Free competition among businesses is the American way and it has always been survival of the fittest. I choose to listen to XM radio because I believe it is a better product than AM or FM radio. I deserve as an American to continue to have that choice and not have the product I choose to pay for limited or restricted in any way by government.
